1. When the Yellow Dragon (Hoang Long) organization first negotiated with Bao Dai Government authorities concerning its proposed revolt against the Viet Minh, Bao Dai interpreted the proposal as evidence that the Viet Minh was weakening and believed that the Yellow Dragon organization would come over to his side even though he failed to meet its terms. According to source this view was not correct, since Vietnamese nationalists would stand by the Communists to the end rather than submit to any degree of French control.
2. Bao Dai Government authorities in Hanoi have asked the Yellow Dragon organization to give some proof of its intention to revolt. No satisfactory reply to this request has been received.
